Buchanan in Detroit. OW HE PLANNED TO START A NEW DIPLOMA CHANGING HIS NAME AND PUTTING

NILL—CHANGING HIS NAME AND FUTTISUON A DISCUSS.

[From the Philadelphia Press, August 21.]

PITTEBURGH, August 20.—Before this reaches you Dr. John Buchanan, the wily Scotch dean, bogus-diploma menufacturer.

&c., who is supposed to have committed suicide by jumping from a ferry-boat in the Delaware river, will be safe in the meshes of the authorities in a city far away—close to the borders of her Majesty's dominions. The clews followed up to secure this information are due almost entirely to a series of unforseen circumstances. To the Press alone belongs the credit of effecting the wily schemer's arrest. The newspapers of Pittsburg yesterday morning hinted that the bogus doctor was being shadowed by a gentleman well known in this city. As the information was secured with the understanding that the gentleman's name was not to be mentioned, the papers this afternoon pronounced it a purely sensational invention. Your correspondent, however, stuck to the clew obtained by him the night previous, and is now enabled, by the enterprise of the Press, to give you a truthful account of all the circumstances that led to Brethann's identification and arrest. A prise of the Press, to give you a truthful account of all the circumstances that led to Buchanan's identification and arrest. A well-known veterinary surgeon of this city, and formerly a resident of Philadelphia, where his father is well known, is the detective in the case. Dr. Jennings has played the rôle successfully on former occasions, and his latest exploit will thrust him into prominence. The Doctor is well acquainted with bogus-diploma Buchanan, and also with his wily ways. When the and also with his wily ways. When the suicide story reached Dr. Jennings it is suicide story reached Dr. Jennings it is road. scarcely necessary to say that he regarded it as entirely too thin, as he had an idea of Buchanan's intentions.

The Greenville and Columbia Railroad.

DECISION IN FAVOR OF THE DANVILLE RAILROAD SYNDICATE. THE AMATEUR DETECTIVE AND HIS CLEWS.

Shortly after the latter's arrest Dr. Jennings learned that Buchanan bad become possessed of twenty shares in a college at Detroit, Mich. As he facetiously remarked, it was to be the same old mill. A charter claimed by them at $2,393,600. The bad been secured, and the understanding lowing is the order entered in the case: was that the institution would be ready to grind out bogus diplomas early in the winter of the present year. The museum attached to the Philadelphia Eclectic College, of which Buchanan was dean, was to be used in the new Detroit college, against which a party in Detroit claims to have a mortgage. A friend of Buchanan's informed Dr. Jennings, of Pittsburgh, of the new enterprise, and also told him that the college was to be personally supervised by the bogus Doctor, who said it was getting entirely too warm for his further residence in the Quaker City. This information led Dr. Jennings to believe that Buchanan would strike immediately for the Michigan metropolis, where, under an assumed name, was that the institution would be ready to metropolis, where, under an assumed name, well disguised in appearance, he would drive a thriving trade. The site selected was also chosen with the view that in case of trouble the wily Scotchman would skip the St. Clair bids for the said property higher than $2, river into the province of Ontario.

Dr. John Buchanan is at present, and was at the time of his supposed suicide, in the city of Detroit. The name assumed by him with the Master along with the bid a bond at the time of his supposed suicide, in the city of Detroit. The name assumed by him was Dr. Fairchild. The gray side-whiskers in the sum of $200,000, as the stipulated which he also parts in the middle, and an which he also parts in the middle, and an worn by Buchanan during his residence in the Quaker City are no more. His head is the Master, conditioned that they comply shaven close. All alterations that could be made in his dress and appearance were effected with real artistic taste, and even the property. most intimate acquaintances of Doctor John would fail to recognize him. But his disguise was penetrated by one who has known time fixed for the advertisment above, and, him and been thrown into his society for if at the expiration of that time, there many years. The gentleman whose keen should be no guaranteed advanced bid deeyes discerned behind the disguise the feaadelphia? The two men met on the public street, and no other persons heard the name of Buchanan mentioned. The supposed suicide was taken aback, and hastily stammered out words of warning. He told the gentleman not to address bim by that name, as he had dropped it forever. The man so famous as Dr. John Buchanan henceforth was to be known as plain Dr. Fairchild, professor in the new Detroit college. The episode took place on the day that the suicide startled the residents of the Quaker City. When the two separated the bogus-diploma man turned to the one who pene-

A LETTER FROM DETROIT. Dr. Jennings, Jr., being fully informed as to the genuineness of the above story, was greatly amused when he heard of Buchanan's suicide. In order to be assured ulars concerning Dr. Buchanan alias Fatrto a friend in Detroit asking for full particulars concerning Dr. Buchanan alias Fairchild. He received the following communication on Wednesday:

"Detroit, August 18, 1880.

"You will recollect that John Buchanan, the Philadelphia bogus-diploma man, is under $12,000 bail to appear at court, since which time he has been still dealing in the bogus tickets, having had a new plate engraved and 200 diplomas printed. After five or six diplomas were sold the remainder were seized and his son and son-in-law arrested, and are now in jail. The old man could not be found, but had they come here they would have got him. He and the friend who is harboring him conceived a scheme to have the old man suicide. His friend here, knowing that I had a knowledge of his presence here, told me of the scheme. I advised him to let such an attempt alone, as he would find himself in trouble. I supposed the scheme was to have been carried out here, but by the telegraph notices in last evening's papers I see a notice of the suicide of John Buchanan, the notices in last evening's papers I see a notice of the suicide of John Buchanan, the notice of the suicide of John Buchanan, the notorious, from a ferry-boat (the last for the night) between Philadelphia and Camden. The alarm was given by a doctor in company with Buchanan. The boat was stopped, and search for the body made, but no traces of it could be found. If they carry out the scheme of suicide, that will settle the business, so far as that is concerned. The body not being found will in a few days cause suspicion to be aroused, and few days cause suspicion to be aroused, and the old man's friend will be called on to perjure himself or make a clean sweep and Carolina Railroad Company, composed of the new Western North Carolina Railroad Company North Carolina Railroad Carolina R perfure himself or make a clean sweep and blow. Upon the notices appearing in the papers here both Buchanan and his friend left the city. I am under no obligations to any one to keep the knowledge of the affair secret. When the old man came here he was introduced to me as Dr. Fairchild, but notwithstanding the lad man's whiskers were shaven off as well in the city of New York. came here he was introduced to me as Dr. Fairchild, but notwithstanding the old man's whiskers were shaven off, as well as his hair, I said: 'Well, Buck, when did you leave Philadelphia?' Seeing that his disguise did not prevent me from identifying him, he said to me, 'Keep quiet.' I replied, 'All right,' Now you have it all. The old man looks careworn, but I am satisfied that if the ruse of spilcide succeeds he will start a college here, the charter for are non-residents. The old man looks careworn, but I am satisfied that if the ruse of suicide succeeds he will start a college here, the charter for which has already been grauted, and Buck's museum will be here to use in it. A party here claims to hold a mortgage upon it, whether genulae or not I do not know. Twenty shares of the new College of Mitchigan were found in Buck's possession and in his name; so you see the scheme was long ago planned and party executed. It is contemplated to run the institution the coming winter."

At 5 o'clock this evening Dr. Jennings sent the following telegram to his friend in Detroit:

"Privisoram, August 20, 1880.

"Have you Buck where can lay your hand on him?

AN APPIDAVIT OF CONTEMPLATED CONSPIRACY. PHILADELPHIA, PA., August 22 .- The Re-PHILADELPHIA, PA., August 22.—The Record will publish to-morrow morning an affidavit relating to the reported suicide of Dr. John Buchanan, the bogus-diploma vender who was under $12,000 bail to appear at court for trial. Alfred Urian, being duly sworn, deposes that he was approached by one M. V. Chapman, Buchanan's brotherin-law, who offered deponent $50 to enter into a conspiracy whereby Dr. Buchanan could be personated in a pretended suicide by jumping from a ferry-boat.

Dr. Buchanan.

Editors Atlanta Constitution: I have lately seen a copy of the daily Constitution containing a ventilation of the notorious John Buchanan, of Philadelphia, and his bogus-diploma concern. Notwithstanding Buchanan claimed himself as being an eclec-tic physician, and advertised his college and all its behoofs as eclectic also, it is nothing but justice to the eclectic medical profession of the United States that you, through the columns of your paper, inform the world at large that the aforesaid John Bu-chanan had been formally expelled from the State Medical Association of Eclectic Physicians of Pennsylvania; that he has been repeatedly denounced and exposed as a [Special telegram to the Raleigh News.]

Mr. Thomas Hughes, late M. P., arrived in New York on Saturday. Probably no Englishman is better known in this country or better loved than the author of "Tom Brown's School-Days at Rugby" and the famous books which succeeded it. There famous books which succeeded it. There was a personality about these books, a genial warmth, which made every one feel an intimate interest in the writer, nor is this sympathy undeserved. Mr. Hughes is said to be full of the feelings which he inspires in others, a warm-hearted humanitarian, keen for every project looking to the social amelioration of the race. Mr. Hughes is in his fifty-seventh year. A graduate of Oriel College, Oxford, a member of the bar and a Queen's counsel, and it is likely that his solid writings on the economic themes to which he is now giving his attention will which he is now giving his attention will become as famous as his earlier fictions were. Mr. Hughes has given especial attention latterly to the relations of labor and capital to trades' unions and the principle of cooperation. His present visit to this country is in the interest of the latter. He wishes to give his personal attention to the establishment of cooperative stores here on the plan according to which they are so suc-cessfully worked in England. He also comes as the agent of an English emigration society, which holds a large tract of land in East Tennessee, and proposes to colonize it in proper form with English

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.—[Warren (N. C.) News of August 13th.]—Married at the hotel, in this place, on the morning of the 7th instant, by the Rev. W. C. Gannon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Mr. Charles L. Finch and Miss Sarah Alice Charles L. Finch and Miss said Anto-Baskervill, of Boydton, Va. Dr. E. C. Laird and Miss Alice L. Marrow, of Meck-lenburg county, Va., accompanied the bri-dal pair. The bridal party left Warrenton for Henderson in the afternoon, from which place they will shortly repair to their home in Mecklenburg.

Mr. Finch is a promising young lawyer, and is editor of the Mecklenburg Democrat.

The bride is a daughter of the late Captain George Baskervill, of Granville county, and granddaughter of Hon. William O. Goode, deceased, of Mecklenburg, Va. We wish the happy couple a long and prosperous journey through life.

The body of the man murdered for taking a bunch of grapes at Agnew Station, near Pittsburgh, Pa., was found Saturday night near Rochester, Pa., and has been identified as that of Robert Bryson, of Harrisburg, son of Robert Bryson, Sr., a wealthy retired iron manufacturer, and nephew of James and Robert McCormick, two of Pennsylva-nia's wealthiest men. He was also first cousin to Hon. J. Donald Cameron's first wife. He was highly educated, but subject to a severe nervous affection, caused by having once been nearly suffocated by gas, which slightly clouded his intellect. He had been to the Hot Springs, Ark., some weeks, and it is believed he became demented on his return trip, and either tramped from St. Louis or got off a train.

"Like father, like son" is specially ap plicable to Sims Reeves, the great English first public appearance a month ago. A London correspondent says of the son: "He affected gait. He bows, smiles, holds his music exactly like his father, and has all his selepossession. He has been carefully trained and so successfully coached by his father that if you shut your eyes during the singing of such a composition as Schubert's 'Ave Maria' by either of them you would be puzzled to say which had been singing.
